Efex Furniture Mouldings and Appliques
New Zealand and Australia 2021

*it's your home
make it chic
make it unique*

Welcome

I am very excited to be able to introduce to you our EFEX catalogue. This book and catalogue all rolled into one is designed to inspire you with some great ideas on how to use EFEX flexible mouldings and trims.

We all want our homes to be unique and show our own special style. In today's mass produced market it's not easy to buy what you really want. But.... It is easy to repaint your favorite pieces and add some EFEX.

Change is good for the soul so get to a flea market for car boot sale and find some bits you like. Up cycling furniture is so rewarding and satisfying you will enjoy the challenge.

All you need is paint, contact adhesive for the Efex and the results are yours to enjoy while you paint and glue.

Our new tag line says it all with EFEX it is super easy to "make your home chic, make it unique".

Enjoy

All About Efex

Efex are mouldings and appliqués designed for furniture and home decor. They are the only fully bendable mouldings on the market today. Other mouldings can't bend without steaming or heating and must be applied to flat surfaces. Efex are totally flexible and can wrap around corners or complex shapes. Just glue your embellishment with contact cement. No nailing or clamping needed. They can be cut to size or changed.

Efex can be applied to wood, plaster, metal, glass, almost everything. Use them on furniture, walls, doors, or mirrors. They can be painted, gilded, even stained. And stand up well outside.

For forty years efex flexible mouldings have been made in New Zealand until.....four years ago a chance meeting with our artist friend Margaret Woolley led Lydia Langston to become the new owner of the company.

Efex are handmade in Rockland Maine and Auckland New Zealand. Lydia Langston along with her New Zealand partner Penny Whiting have decades of experience in making products that will enhance any part of your home.

Over 180 different styles are available, in ten categories such as: Bows, Swags, Rosettes, and our Signature Flexible Trims. These modern reproductions exhibit all the intricate detail of the original classic designs.

This year we have added a new line of ultralight mouldings. These non flexible large appliqués have a flat back to stand proud above mirrors, cupboards, or headboards.

All styles originate with historical patterns of the 16th and 17th centuries. We travel the world to find new and unique masters for our molds.

Please see the attached flyer or website for prices and additional products.

Applying Your Efex

Step 1 - Use pencil or chalk to outline the efex on your project. Chalk is recommended if you are staining the final product.

Step 2 - Use contact cement like ADOS F2 to glue your efex. Brush the glue on the back side of the molding and on the surface you are attaching it to. You do not need a thick coating of glue on either piece.

Step 3 - Wait until the glue is just dry. Depending upon temperature and humidity this takes around 15 minutes. If the glue is still tacky you won't get a good bond so patience is key.

When the glue is dry to the touch, carefully press the molding onto the glue covered surface. Carefully align the molding before step 4.

Wait until the contact glue is dry, about 15 minutes and paint away.

Step 4 - Press all of the edges together making certain the contact is good and they are attached.

When working on a horizontal surface, you don't need clamps. Just make certain the glue is not too tacky and push on the edges to completely adhere.

Paint or stain with your favorite product.

History

Greek Key, Egg and Dart, Bell Flower, names that describe a dazzling array of decorative motifs. So... what is the story of these grand embellishments of the 16th and 17th century?

Stretching from the courts of Vienna, Bonn, Paris, and London these architectural plaster details have their roots in ancient Rome, Assyria, and Greece. These designs are carved on the Coliseum, the Acropolis and the Temple of the Mount and all became hallmarks of Neoclassical Style.

Palladian, Adams and others, returned from the grand tour of Rome and Athens with dreams of a new or neoclassical style. Robert Adams, the famous English architect decided that the key to his new classic style was designing the entire house. Working closely with furniture maker Thomas Chippendale he provided the designs for everything, from wall plaster to furniture carvings.

Popularized by the frescos of Italy, plaster work spread across the continent like wildfire. For centuries fine stucco with ornate gilding became the height of fashion.

Specialized artisans installed these designs. The Adams brothers had a division dedicated to plaster. While other builders used a family from the Swiss border called stucatori who like gypsies, roamed England and Ireland plying their trade.

HANDMADE HISTORY

Every one of our mouldings are hand made and historically accurate.

Today we reproduce all of our patterns in modern materials and sizes that fit our home and today's lifestyle.

Think of it as a modern neoclassical tradition. All still handcrafted just with an updated twist. Molded and poured instead of being carved in wood or plaster.

Q & A with Lydia Langston

Have you always been a maker?

Yes, even when I was a scientist I was always making things and thinking up new ways to repurpose old things - even repurposing scientific ideas.

What is your favorite design style?

I am totally drawn to French Sea Side Style, a term coined by the French author Sebastian Siraudau. Combined with French Country and a little Scandinavian thrown in, it says everything about my design aesthetic.

What is your favorite travel destination?

We travel alot and have been all over the world but I would say it's New Zealand with Scotland coming in a close second. London and Paris are also great places to visit, even though especially in France we have spent a great deal of our traveling time outside of cities in the country such as Normandy and Provence.

What is your favorite reflex project.

That is hard to actually pick just one, but I guess it is the Trumeau mirror to the left. It hangs in our entry hall and reminds me of France every time I walk in the door.

What do you do in your free time?

When not traveling we spend much of our free time racing our classic sailboat Leaf. When we're not racing travels also include cruising and adventuring all over the globe.

How do you name the moldings?

The moldings names are often from our travels. M was named for Madame when I was in Paris with several girl friends. Madame X was named after a picture by John Singer Sargent. I was reading the book about her called Strapless when I found the molding.

What can't you live without?

My husband, labradors, coffee, cashmere, wine, my apple devices, and sailing.

What is your favorite movie/TV show?

I love period dramas like A Place to Call Home, The Crown and Victoria. For movies I can't pick just one. As a child I knew all the words to Gone With The Wind by heart every word in all three plus hours of the movie! Then it was Out of Africa, I knew the words to that by heart also. That was transplanted by The Duchess and now it's Australia. You can see that there is a theme to all four of these, they all revolve around making a home.

The Art of Margaret Woolley

A short story of how we discovered
Efex in New Zealand

Ethereal paintings of Arabic ladies and mountains in Pakistan hang above stunning painted french antiques. Or are they really antiques?

In the home of Margaret Woolly some are antique some are not. All are bespoke and painted herself.

Art and Antiques In New Zealand

Margaret Woolley has been a friend for over five decades. Over the years, we have spent many a wonderful times with our friends, sailing, and adventuring.

We have several of Margarets fine art paintings in our home, She is and has been a well know fine art painter in New Zealand for decades.

Imagine my surprise when visiting her new home one day I said “Margaret where did you get those beautiful mirrors.?” Her answer “ I made them dear.”

Small exasperated sigh on my part, as in my head I am silently thinking, well yes I understand you might have painted them but they are carved and very French. Again, where did you get them? I think.

Before I could look silly and ask again she had vanished to the other end of their house. Humm... what's up? Upon her return, she was carrying a brown paper bag with cut up bits of moldings, that were flexible.

“I made them out of these.” she said handing me the bag.....somewhere between an instant affair of the heart and lighting. Wow, these are cool!

A walk around her home in Auckland is a visual treat. Inside and outside, lovely pale french style is shown off with mirrors and her art. Modern Impressionist and Neoclassical Style blend seamlessly together.

Not only has she introduced us to these beautiful mouldings but she also provided the use of the original plaster to make our ultralight swag. Which I have named the Margaret. I can't wait for this spring to see what she has created this year.

Gustavian Grandeur

Named Gustavian Style after King Gustav of Sweden this style flourished in nordic climes after the kings extensive travels to the Court of Louis the XVI of France. Upon returning home he began redecorating in the rococo style of Louis with a paired down aesthetic that was more in keeping with his countries ethos. We have put to gether a series of mouldings that fit the feeling of this wonderful paired back style. (With more coming soon.)

Flexible Trims

Our fully flexible trims can be used for an almost endless range of projects.

They can be wrapped around a table, bent at right angles, mitered on corners, or even cut to make different patterns. Most are around four feet long with a width varying from half an inch to three inches. These are the only fully flexible trims available on the market today.

Ultra Lights

Ultralights are a new way to reimagine moldings for the uses we find in today's homes. For now we have eight styles with many more in progress. The names are inspired by the places we have visited, books we've read and movies we have seen.

Over the years that we have been making Efix we have had many requests for larger moldings with more depth.

We had also collected several original bronze medallions and some large plaster appliques - one of which was an antique that Margaret Woolley had at her home.

However, when you make larger moldings of a certain size you begin to add both depth and weight to the final product. Original bronzes are heavy and must be nailed or screwed into place. Plaster is fragile and must be glued with clamps making it hard to attach to vertical surfaces.

We wanted to make a few moldings that could sit proud above a surface and still be pretty when viewed from the side. Therefore it needed to have a flat back.

Our design parameters were to make a large applique that is light enough to be easily glued on a vertical surface.

Reaching this objectives took on the air of a science project with many experiments. Not all successful. Traditional compo was too heavy as was standard resin. In the end working with some boat building friends we developed a new resin formula that is fully paintable as well as, well...
